> A story told in the eyes of Hilde.

> The cool ocean wind blew against my face. The stone ridge felt cold and rugged against my bare feet. The sun was slowly setting and it's reflection against the water was a beautiful burst of colors. I kneeled down upon the rocky ground to a puddle. I picked some of the clear water up and splashed it against my face. A little rose was growing next to it and I picked it up. The beautiful scent crept through my body and reminded me of him. I felt a sharp pain in my soul as I remembered how he died in my arms and I could do nothing. The warm sun didn't even help me. I felt cold and alone, in despair and sorrow. I walked to the edge of the ridge and jumped to the jagged and twisted rocks below. The rocks impaled through my stomach. A light? A person? It was Duo. He took my hand and led me to eternal happiness, heaven...
